

DISCIPLINE FastFacts

from Academic Analytics

2.1%

of all articles published in the discipline

In the last four years of publishing data in the Academic Analytics database, of the hundreds of journal titles in which Anthropology scholars publish, American Journal of Physical Anthropology is the journal title where scholars publish the most.

Collaborative research among faculty in Anthropology accounts for 21.8% of all co-authored Anthropology journal publications.

21.8%

169

Disciplines

Anthropology exhibits a very high level of collaborative research, conducting collaborative research with faculty in over 169 separate disciplines.

In all, collaborative research inside and outside the discipline accounts for 72.6% of the Anthropology journal articles captured in the Academic Analytics database (2015-2018 inclusive).

72.6%

Collaborations with other disciplines most often involve researchers in Geology/Earth Science where they account for 5.1% of all co-authored journal publications. The next frequent collaborative field, Sociology, accounts for 4.5% of the total co-authored journal publications for Anthropology. Do you know who are the top potential collaborators in these fields that best complement your research and where they are located?

Data from the Academic Analytics database indicate that of ANTHROPOLOGY faculty currently receive federal funding. (Grants received 2014-2018 inclusive.)

34.8%

58.7%

20.1%

The top two sources of federal funding for Anthropology are the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health providing 58.7% and 20.1% of captured funding, respectively for the past five years.

Since Academic Analytics uses the individual researcher as the unit of record, we can look across all faculty in a discipline to view their current rank and the years since their most advanced degree.

FULL
professor

ASSOCIATE professor

ASSISTANT professor

29
YEARS

15
YEARS

6
YEARS

Average academic ages (years since their most advanced degree) of Anthropology scholars nationally

Percent of faculty ranks within the national discipline

43%

34%

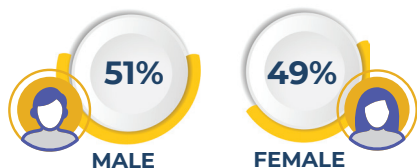

23%

How does the distribution of faculty in your department compare to the national averages, and what are the implications for planning?

Research Insight from Academic Analytics can help answer that.

Of the faculty population for whom we can infer gender

According to the data captured in the Academic Analytics database, 51.8% of Anthropology faculty have received a national honorific award. The American Anthropological Association provides the most honorific awards for the discipline, accounting for 12.7% of all recorded awards. Of the faculty population for whom we can infer gender, the distribution of awards granted by the American Anthropological Association is 44% of awards going to male scholars and 56% going to female scholars.